VENICE — A 15-year-old Granite City boy apparently jumped to his death from the Merchants Bridge in Venice about 1 a.m. Friday.

Tommy H. Batey of the 1100 block of 22nd Street jumped from the railroad bridge into the Mississippi River — apparently on a dare made by a man who left the scene after the boy went off the bridge, witnesses said.

Venice Police Sgt. Bari Reed estimated the distance to the water from where the boy jumped was about 100 feet. The main channel of the river flows between the first and second piers, he said.

The U.S. Coast Guard searched the river for the body, starting at 1:30 a.m. They briefly suspended operations to change crews before resuming.

The search was discontinued again for a period of time when lightning and torrential rains struck the area about 5 a.m. Friday.

When the weather cleared, the search was expanded to a five-mile stretch downstream, extending to the MacArthur Bridge south of downtown St.

Louis, Coast Guard officials said.

A McKinley Bridge toll collector first alerted Venice police to the incident.

Patrolmen Neal Mize, Oliver Mason and Rodney Davis arrived at the riverfront and found Callie Bates, 15, of Granite City, the victim's sister, and William A. Sauerwein of the 2300 block of East 23rd Street standing under the Merchants Bridge.

Sauerwein, 26, and the girl told officers that Tommy Batey climbed onto the bridge and walked out to the first pier before jumping off the south side of the bridge.

The man who had issued the dare to Tommy was reportedly known only to the group by his first name, Jim. He left when the boy jumped, police were told.

Mize said he looked over the river near the bridge, but couldn't find any trace of the boy. He immediately requested assistance from the Coast Guard and the Terminal Railroad Association Police Department.

Two men arrested in DCI 'crack' down

VENICE — Two men were arrested Wednesday by agents of the Illinois State Police Department's Division of Criminal Investigation, each in connection with dealing in crack cocaine.

Sgt. Ed Muzey said that undercover agents executed a search warrant at the home of Lawrence Dean, 52, of the 400 block of Weaver Street at 9:15 a.m. and found a "mid-level quantity" of crack.

Dean was charged with unlawful possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance, crack cocaine.

His bond was set at $20,000 Thursday morning in Madison County Circuit Court by Associate Judge Elmar Duff-Williams.

Prior to them executing the search warrant, the agents said, one agent was able to buy a small quantity of crack cocaine from another person at the corner of Weaver and Douglas streets.

Henry Byrd, 35, of the 800 block of West Jefferson St., Madison, was arrested and charged with delivery of a controlled substance, crack cocaine.

Muzey said the corner was known to agents as a location for illicit drug dealing. He said it was a common practice for dealers at that location to carry small quantities of drugs.

Byrd's bond was also set at $20,000 by Duff-Williams on Thursday morning.

Both men are being held in the Madison County Jail at Edwardsville.

Residents told dioxin risk low

GRANITE CITY — Bob Smith, one of about 60 people who attended an eight-hour informational meeting Thursday concerning dioxin contamination at Jennison-Wright Corp. in Granite City, said he came away reassured about the safety of the property.

Smith works at Neyra Industries Inc., which is located on Jennison-Wright property next to a lagoon where the highest concentrations of chemicals were found.

Smith said he and the three other Neyra workers are "a little bit more reassured" after an eight-hour meeting at Second Baptist Church, 2100 Illinois Ave.

On Aug. 24, the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency announced the results of tests conducted last November in the neighborhood around the Jennison-Wright plant at 900 22nd St. Results of the tests are available for viewing at the Granite City Public Library, 2301 Delmar Ave.

The meeting was held to inform residents near the plant. It was set up by 4th Ward Aldermen Dan Partney and Dan Brown, in whose ward the plant sits.

The EPA told residents the sample concentrations taken from soil and groundwater indicate no immediate health threat to residents.

"In no way is this another Times Beach," said EPA spokesman Virginia Wood. Times Beach, Mo., on the Meramec River in St. Louis County, became a ghost town after heavy concentrations of dioxin were discovered.

She said the trace amounts of dioxin found here were in far lower concentrations than the level set by the U.S. EPA as a cleanup objective for residential soil. She also said they were of a different, less toxic, type than the Times Beach dioxin.

"We're more concerned with the long-term effects of other chemicals we have found here," Wood said, including pentachlorophenol and other chemicals found in creosote.

Jennison-Wright treats railroad ties and wood flooring blocks with creosote and other preservatives at the 26-acre plant.

Wood said none of the concentrations of chemicals found "pose an immediate health risk." She said the EPA will gather more data on long-term health consequences.

She said the EPA is negotiating with Jennison-Wright to perform additional tests at the plant and to work out an agreement on cleanup.

Some of the residents who attended the meeting wanted the Department of Public Health to take tissue and blood

Really 'bugged' neighbors under attack

GRANITE CITY — Billions, trillions, zillions — there is no word large enough to describe the number of roaches at 2086 Dewey Ave.

As you walk through the house, they drop from the ceiling and run up and down the walls. There are so many on the bare wood floor it often looks like it has a moving cover.

In what used to be a kitchen, the black moving mass on the ceiling might be more roaches — roaches are what continually drop out of it and fall to the floor.

Outside on the lawn, a dozen or so are kicked up with every step. Even in noon-time bright sun on Thursday, hundreds could be seen running across the sidewalk in front of the house.

Norma Mize, who lives next door, squashed a roach as it climbed up the wall on her porch.

"We spent $85 getting our house bug-bombed and they're back already," she said. "I'm going to call (the exterminator) back, but you know they're going to say it's not their fault. They're (the roaches) coming from over there."

Mize said she could watch them walking over as she mowed the lawn.

Laura Rayoum, who lives two houses down, said she was paid $25 to clean the house at 2086 after the last resident moved out. She was paid by the owner, a man from out of town.

"This is nothing compared to then," she said. "Even after we 'bombed' it they were 2-inches thick on the floor."

"... The people were filthy. The whole place stunk. Imagine a hundred or two hundred nursing homes with the stink of all those bed pans in one little area. That's the way it smelled. They had pots of (urine) still standing around on the floor."

Mize said: "You could smell it all over the block before they came and put in a window."

All the proper city inspectors have inspected the house, the warning letter has been written and mailed by certified mail, and if the violations are not corrected, condemnation proceedings against it will start within the month.

Mize said she understands the city has done all it can, that things take time. But she said that doesn't mean she has to be happy and she said she wants the house torn down "right now."

Grounded: He's 'Charlie on the Bridge' no more

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

EADS BRIDGE — The colorful stuffed animals are gone now from the gritty office at the western end of the bridge. So is their master, Charlie Imethun — known to thousands as Charlie On The Bridge.

In the spring of 1980, Charlie began posting daily jokes on his toll booth. He became a little legend after the late Jack Carney of KMOX discovered him. Newspaper stories were written about him. Other radio talkers called him up to chat on the air. Travelers from far-away places sent him postcards and jokes.

Thursday was Charlie's last day on the bridge. After 38½ years as a toll taker, Charlie accepted his last 50-cent toll shortly before 3 p.m. With the permission of bridge authorities, he pocketed the two quarters as mementos. He then left the bridge he had occupied since April 4, 1951.

Friday morning, Charlie reported to his new assignment — switchboard operator at the Terminal Railroad Association headquarters in Granite City.

Thursday was an emotional, bittersweet day for Charlie. All day long, the booth telephone kept ringing as his many friends called to say goodbye. People dropped off cards. Three women gave roses.

KMOX called. Channel 4 dropped by. At 3 p.m. the Eads Bridge officially became the property of the city of St. Louis, which traced the MacArthur Bridge to the Terminal Railroad Association. Eads will be used for the Metro Link light-rail system as well as for auto traffic.

Charlie turned his booth over to an employee of the city Traffic Division, took his cash drawer to the office and cashed out. "I wanted to be the last,"

Cameron told him.

Charlie took the money and shook hands with Cameron. Then he wept.

"It's been a rough day," Charlie said with a swipe at his eyes. "I must have got 50 cards yesterday and today."

Captain George Muraski of the TRRA Police Department shook his hand. "Charlie, you did a real good job," Muraski said.

That he did. Especially since he started telling his jokes. There's a reason why he did. In 1979, Charlie was told he had kidney cancer.

"It changed my life," Charlie said earlier this summer. "I thought, 'I'd better start having a good time, 'cause I might not have that many days left. I'm not gonna waste any of 'em. And they say laughter can cure some serious illnesses.'"

Charlie has been cancer-free for 10 years now. But he still goes to the hospital.

He joined a group that entertains at hospitals and nursing homes. "It makes my day to see smiling faces," he said.

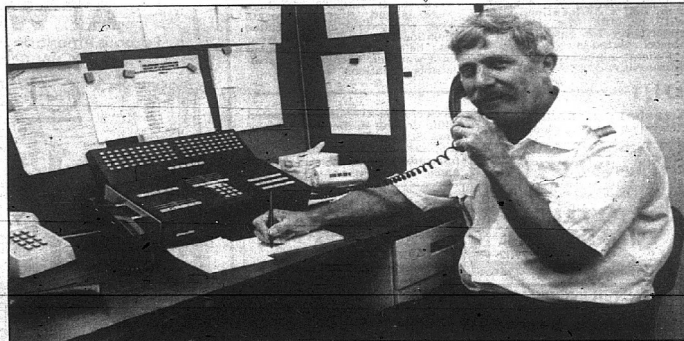

He has really been something else, this guy," said Dick Cameron, Charlie's last customer.

"He's cheered people up every day," Cameron said. "He's a bright person in this world: His philosophy is, 'If I cheered you up, you should cheer somebody else up.'"

For the record, Charlie's last joke was, "How do you keep a turkey in suspense?" OK, here? Charlie just grinned and said nothing. Get it? But Charlie On The Bridge will survive in a way. D. Keith Shelby, the new bridge supervisor, said every Monday they will post a message from Charlie and his photograph on the bridge.

"He said we could call him for jokes," Shelby said.

"It's kind of like the water in the river," he said. "The water goes on (downstream), but the river's still there."

CHARLIE SETTLES INTO his new job at TRRA headquarters in Granite City.

If you want to call him, his new number is (618) 451-8300. His address is 2016 Madison Ave., Granite City, Ill. 62040.

"We're history," said Capt. Muraski as he got ready to leave.

Charlie gathered the rest of his belongings from the bridge office: his joke files, the bag of foreign coins he collected over the years. And the extra sign he had posted Thursday. It read:

"At 3 p.m. Thursday the St. Louis city takes over the Eads Bridge. Thanks for all your smiles. I'll miss you all very much. Love ya, Charlie."

Youth caught on theater roof

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A 16-year-old St. Louis youth driving a stolen van was pursued by squad car and on foot through downtown Granite City and eventually captured on top of the Washington Theater building at 2:45 a.m. Aug. 28.

The boy, who had a history of problems with the law, was charged with possession of an auto stolen from St. Louis, fleeing and attempting to elude police, driving without a driver's license and other traffic charges, authorities said.

He was taken to the Madison County Juvenile Detention Home in Edwardsville, where he awaited transfer to St. Louis City Police custody, according to Granite City Det. Nedwin Tapp.

While officers were searching the downtown area for the suspect, they were alerted by two cab drivers that a youth was running through downtown parking area at 19th Street and Cleveland Boulevard.

"The fleeing youth initially climbed some steps to the roof of the former Lord Nelson shop in the 1200 block of 19th Street, but came back down and ran to the Washington Theater, where he climbed onto the third-level roof," the building is on 19th Street near Edison Avenue. A ladder truck was driven to the scene by Granite City Police Department personnel and officers went to the top of the theater to find the youth.

The suspect was cornered on the roof but initially refused to give up, instead hanging onto power lines to avoid being captured. He was persuaded to come down by officers.

The juvenile appeared "cooled-up" and acted irrationally but was not hurt, Tapp said.

Patrolman Edward Robertson, who spotted the stolen van and pursued the suspect through the downtown area, first by squad car and then on foot, was joined in the chase by Sgt. Tim Lylerla and Patrolmen Nick Huniak and Kevin Thebes.

The Granite City officers were assisted by a Madison city police officer and by a Madison County sheriff's deputy and her K-9 dog. The episode began when Robertson was patrolling in the 1900 block alley between Madison and Grand avenues and saw a black and gray 1988 Chevrolet Astro van with a Missouri registration being driven from the Autoco East parking lot at 1911 Madison Ave.

The van went south through the alley without headlights and the officer noticed that the rear window of the vehicle was shattered.

Robertson followed, going west on 19th Street, and stopped the van at 19th Street and Delmar Avenue. He ordered the youth to get out of the vehicle and at first the boy leaned toward the officer, but then leaped back in the seat and drove away, fleeing south on Delmar with Robertson in pursuit.

The van traveled south to 18th Street, west on 18th and north on Benton Street, driving through the parking lot at the Illini Motel and back onto northbound Benton, passing stop signs at 20th and 21st streets.

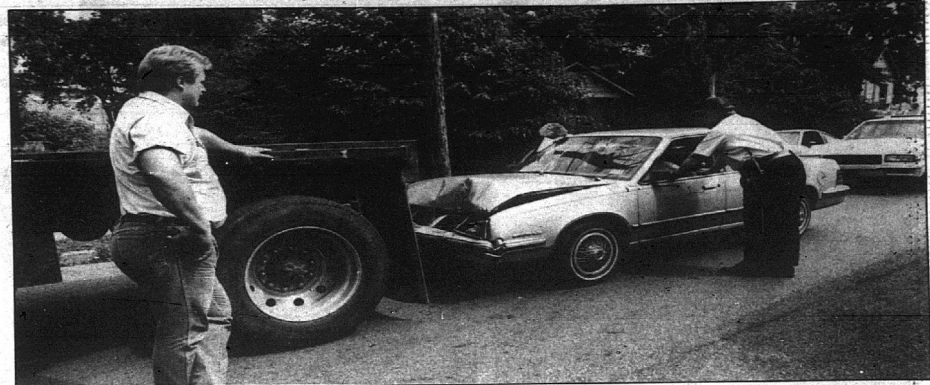

The driver stopped in the 2100 block of Benton, where residents told the officer a man had abandoned the van and had run west between buildings toward Adams Street.

Robertson searched the immediate area but was unable to locate the suspect.

At that point, the youth was seen by taxi drivers running near the 7-Eleven store and the chase continued on foot to the buildings on 19th Street.

A check of the van disclosed the steering column was broken apart. Red droplets on the steering column and steering wheel, believed to be blood from the suspect, were evident.

The van had been reported stolen the same day from the St. Louis Police Department's 5th District area.

WAITING FOR AMBULANCE: Ignacio Mendoza, 86, of the 1100 block of Grand Avenue, Madison, struck his head on the windshield and waits inside his car to be taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Medical Center after the auto hit the rear of a flatbed tractor-trailer truck at 11:30 a.m. Thursday. Truck driver Glen F. Voss, 28, of Carlyle, at left, said he was stopped in traffic preparing to turn left into Mack's Diner from 14th Street, near Edwardsville Road, when the accident occurred. Evelyn Bush, 66, of Madison, a passenger in the car, declined medical attention. Patrolman Bill Curtis is seen talking to the injured man.

Man booked on warrants after incident

Granite City

Responding to a disturbance Aug. 30 at a residence in the 2700 block of Buxton Avenue, officers were met outside the home by Denise L. Rodgers, who alleged that her husband, Michael Wayne Rodgers, 31, had struck her on the stomach and an arm with his fists during an argument.

She said she had fled from the house in order to contact police. At the home, Michael Rodgers allegedly pushed against an officer and attempted to jump from a porch.

He allegedly continued to push and kick at officers and was carried bodily down a flight of stairs to a squad car.

Charged with resisting arrest and battery, he also was booked on three warrants. A Collinsville warrant alleged failure to appear on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol, a Madison warrant called for jail commitment and a Granite City warrant alleged failure to appear on a DUI charge.

It's OK to look, appeals court determines

By Matt Hall

Standing the length of a football field away, Wilma Smith was slightly obscured from view by two 16-foot chain link fences, one topped with barbed wire, the other with razor wire.

That day in May 1988 was the first time Larry Coffman ever saw his pen pal. He did so while standing in the east end of the track at the Missouri Eastern Correctional Center at Pacific, where he was serving a 15-year sentence for three sodomy convictions.

Coffman, formerly of south St. Louis, and Smith, of Noel, Mo., hadn't been allowed to see each other the day before, but he called her at her hotel and arranged the next day's attempted meeting.

There was a momentary look and a wave goodbye. Four months later the two were married, but not before Coffman, 44, spent 90 days in special confinement for that fleeting glimpse.

No one ever said being in love was easy. While not offering an opinion on love, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled this week that tossing Coffman into special confinement for looking off prison property deprived him of his liberty "without due process."

The appellate court's decision reverses an opinion by a federal jury that sided with the correctional center's superintendent, Myrna Trickey.

Coffman will get a new trial, and the judge has been instructed to direct the verdict in Coffman's favor, said Gerald F. Greiman, Coffman's court-appointed attorney in the case. The ruling means a jury then will decide what amount of damages, if any, Coffman should get, Greiman said.

"I think it's wonderful," Coffman, in a phone interview Wednesday, said of the appeals court ruling. "I was done unjustly for waving to my (future) wife."

Coffman was placed in the prison's "special adjustment unit" because of the glimpse of Smith and because of his accumulation of other institutional offenses, according to the appeals court. The other offenses included taking two pieces of chicken from behind a service line, smoking in a non-smoking area and possessing sugar and an apple.

In his lawsuit, Coffman claimed that he had broken no known rule, and that in any event state law prohibited prisoners from being placed in the special confinement wing for more than 10 days.

The appeals court agreed with him on both arguments.

Coffman was charged with violating the prison's Rule 23, which in turn prohibits violating rules.

In court, Trickey claimed Coffman violated visitation rules, but the appeals court said that looking at someone a hundred yards away could hardly be called a visit.

"Indeed, it is apparent that Trickey does not know (what rule Coffman violated)," wrote Senior Judge J. Smith Henley. "Never did she cite the specific rule on which she relied when she approved of the punishment."

"You don't get to leave your room (in the adjustment wing of the prison)," Coffman said. Prisoners are marched to the cafeteria, bathroom or showers and then immediately taken back to their cells.

Coffman had no roommate in his cell for half the 90 days he was in, and recreation and library privileges were not allowed, he said.

But he was able to write to Smith. "It's almost like a love story," Coffman said. "We've been happily married since Sept. 18, 1986."

Extra patrols out and about

Troopers will utilize CARE crash-reduction patrols through the Labor Day holiday period, according to the Illinois State Police at Collinsville.

CARE is the acronym for Combined Accident Reduction Efforts and is a traffic safety program for holiday periods, agreed upon by State Police and Highway Patrol departments throughout the United States.

CARE patrols for the Labor Day holiday period were scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. Friday, continuing through midnight tonight, Sept. 4.

Troopers working CARE patrols will be looking for motorists who may be driving while intoxicated and who are violating child passenger protection and seat belt laws.

"Troopers will continue to keep the pressure on to remove unsafe drivers from Illinois roads and make it a safe and happy holiday for everyone," a spokesman said.

Roadside checks during weekend

The Illinois State Police plan to conduct roadside safety checks in the five-county District 11 area during the Labor Day weekend.

The safety checks will be conducted during p.m. and early a.m. hours at locations which will provide the maximum opportunity for enforcement of alcohol-related laws.

Federal highway safety funds administered by the Illinois

Department of Transportation will be used to conduct the safety checks throughout the state.

During the last roadside safety check, held in June, 120 arrests were made and 80 warnings were issued. Sixty motorists were arrested for alcohol related violations, 42 for failing to wear seat belts, one was wanted on a warrant, and 17 for miscellaneous violations.

block of Dale Avenue was arrested while driving in the 2900 block of Iowa Street in the early hours of Aug. 23. He was charged with improper lane usage and driving under the influence of alcohol.

Social worker willing to risk life for peace, justice in Central America

GRANITE CITY — Even though Dave Schenck has never served in the armed forces, he has been in the middle of a war.

He has witnessed helicopters buzzing overhead, heard the exchange of gunfire at night and cannons blasting off in the distance.

That was about three years ago, when he was amid political unrest and upheaval in Central America.

He feared for his life then, and understandably so.

Now he wants to return...yes, wants to return to these countries still plagued with poverty and violence.

Schenck is willing to give up a secure, paying job as a social worker at St. Elizabeth Medical Center in order to become a volunteer in the Peace Brigades International, a group interested in bringing about "real, lasting change" in Central America (especially Guatemala and El Salvador) without the use of violence.

"It's a lot like what Martin Luther King did, and I believe in and practiced," said Schenck.

The group supports no political system and is interested instead in people's rights, according to Schenck. "Especially when it comes to basic rights," he said.

Peace Brigades International

(not to be confused with the Peace Corps) provides room and board — nothing else — to North Americans and Europeans who are willing to leave their countries to go live and work with families fighting for justice in Central America.

"The people are frequently targets of repression," Schenck said. "They may get beaten up, shot at, tortured or killed. So volunteers from FBI serve as escorts and live-ins to these people who are targets of violence, to provide them with a measure of safety and some breathing space to operate."

He's well aware of the risks involved, having been to El Salvador, Nicaragua and Mexico in the past. "I guess it hasn't really hit home yet how risky it's going to be, but at times it does. I told my folks that I wanted to do, and they were concerned about my safety. So am I."

But his convictions are so strong that he's willing to follow his heart rather than his head, this time.

"I have been working with refugees from those countries here in the St. Louis area," said Schenck, who is now an abortion rights, but that there are many other issues that need to be addressed.

"The ACLU can be whatever you want to make of it," Schenck said. "But in order to defend the Constitution, we have to defend individuals who are abhorred."

After the meeting, Fred Floeth of Litchfield, an "off-and-on" ACLU member for several years, said he considers reproductive rights a very important issue.

"I'm pro-choice and I certainly can sympathize with the people on the other side, but they're showing a little less tolerance than the people on this side," he said.

Floeth, who is a school board member and Republican precinct committeeman in Litchfield, said he disagreed with a number of stands the ACLU takes, but that defending individual rights is important.

"I agree with the concept," he said. "The Constitution needs to be protected, and sometimes I don't agree with the ACLU's interpretation."

"The death penalty is an outstanding example. I don't think the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment, so I differ with most people in this room on that issue."

Shannon Nelson of Troy, another person attending the meeting, is hoping there will be enough interest for a local ACLU chapter.

"With the population we have in the Metro East area, we can support a chapter here," she said.

There are a lot of other issues, but because of the recent Supreme Court decision on Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, it's on the top of everybody's list," she said.

South Side that offers sanctuary to refugees from Central America.

"These people have had to flee their countries because of the repression, and I have been impressed and inspired by their courage and hope."

At Casa Arco Iris, he has helped refugees find jobs and get their driver's licenses. He has tutored children, and driven the adults around town to help them become independent.

"It's extremely difficult for them here," Schenck noted, "because it's a world of difference coming from a very impoverished situation to a very affluent situation. It's like they have been totally uprooted."

If it weren't for the Spanish courses he took at St. Louis University, where he was studying to become a Catholic priest, he'd be lost.

He started working at the refugee house after talking with others who were involved with it.

"The people they were helping were fighting for things I always believed were every person's right," he said.

His convictions are so strong that he is able to walk away from a job he is perfectly happy with — not that it's going to be easy.

"Things are really going well," he said of his work at St. Elizabeth. "We've got a great staff, especially on Kettler (the medical center's mental health unit) right now. Ralph (Hausmann) is the best boss I've ever had. It's hard to give up that and all those things."

But the mission that lies ahead is something he's been wanting to do for some time.

"I knew years ago I wanted to do it. Now the time just seems right," he said. "I believe in non-violence, and I wanted to give a chunk of my life to a cause that fulfills that commitment."

He'll spend a minimum of eight months in Central America and decide after that whether to stay longer.

People in Central America are fighting for rights we take for granted in the United States, things such as better wages and health insurance. Those who fight for these are, consequently, labeled as rabble rousers and trouble makers, he said.

Schenck plans to leave his job Sept. 15 and join the non-violent effort in Central America in late September or early October.

"I expect it's going to be a real learning experience," he said.

Day trip highlights southern Illinois

The Granite City Park District will sponsor a one-day trip to southern Illinois on Saturday, Sept. 30.

Reservations can be made on Wednesday, Sept. 6 at 8 a.m. at the Wilson Park Office, Benton and Oregon streets.

Residents of the park district will be given priority with non-residents placed on a waiting list. One person can make no more than two reservations.

The group will leave early in the morning and meet a guide who will spend the day with the group. The first stop will be at the Gen. John A. Logan Museum in Murphysboro. From there they will stop at the Pomona General Store, built in 1876 and operating since that time.

The Bald Knob Cross in Alto Pass will be the next stop. This is the tallest Christian monument in North America and is on the highest point in Illinois.

The group will be treated to funnel cakes and coffee at this point. Also in Alto Pass will be an opportunity for some antique shopping in an old school house before departing for the Alto Vineyards and Winery.

A tour will be made of the winery before departing for a drive through the southern Illinois apple and peach orchards where a stop will be made at a local fruit stand. After that will be a visit to the Lawrence Box and Basket Factory where baskets of all different shapes and sizes are being made while customers watch.

From the Basket Factory in Cobden, the bus will travel to Giant City State Park by the way of the quaint village of Makanda, which is the home of Sen. Paul Simon.

A family-style, all-you-can-eat chicken dinner will be served to the group at the Giant City State Park Lodge. The Giant City Park is 3,694 acres of wood, sandstone formations and an abundance of fascinating plants and wildlife.

The cost of the trip will be $23.95 per person which includes $15 for the bus and $8.95 for the meal.

For further information, call 877-3059.

Social Security number needed

Anyone claiming the $2,000 exemption for a dependent age 2 or over on the 1989 federal income tax return must enter that person's Social Security number, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The number, along with the dependent's name and other information, must be entered on the front of the return whether Form 1040 or Form 1040A. Prior to a recent law change, this requirement only applied to dependents who were at least 5 years old.

If a child or other dependent will be at least 2 years old by the end of the year, the taxpayer may want to consider getting the child a number now. To apply for one, it is necessary to fill out Form SS-5, available from the Social Security Administration, toll-free at 1-800-547-7722.

Also new for 1989, workers claiming the Credit for Child and Dependent Care Expenses must include on their return the name, address and taxpayer identification number of each care provider. If the provider is a non-profit organization, only the name and address are required.

At last, a CD that not only makes sense if rates go down, but also makes sense if rates go up.

ANNUAL RATE

8.37%
ANNUAL YIELD, COMPOUNDED QUARTERLY.

Introducing the Common Sense CD.

Magna's new two-year CD really makes a lot of sense. With just a $2,500 minimum deposit, you can lock into a guaranteed high rate and still have the option to change the rate one time during the two-year life of the CD without any penalty what-so-ever.

The Common Sense CD rate is based on two points below our prime rate. So, if our prime goes up to say 12 1/4% anytime during the next two years, you could then increase your rate to 10 1/4%.

And there's more good news. If our prime would happen to drop, you are still guaranteed the 8 1/4% minimum for the two-year term of the CD. At maturity, this CD will automatically renew at our regular two-year CD rate unless you notify us within the 10-day grace period.

Of course, each depositor is insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC. But please remember, federal law requires a substantial penalty for early withdrawal. The Magna Common Sense CD rate shown above is based on our current prime rate and is subject to change.

This limited time offer may be withdrawn at any time, so hurry.

Kerin Dippel
... Tri City delegate

Local girl in Legion program

Kerin Dippel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dippel of Granite City, was chosen as a delegate to Girl's State, of the Tri-City Unit 113, American Legion Auxiliary, held at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston.

Girl's State is a program sponsored by the Illinois District of the American Legion.

She is an honor student and a band member playing the clarinet.

Dippel gave a report of the experiences at the Auxiliary meeting. She stated that more than 575 young women attended the program. Girl's State is a mythical state and patterned after the state of Illinois' governmental bodies as closely as possible.

The girls form two political parties, live in separate parties, live in separate cities, hold conventions, campaigns, caucuses and elections.

They also perform other duties pertaining to various public affairs.

There is a staff of about 50 women at Girl's State, including experienced teachers of civics and government, a counselor in residence for each city, a staff advisor for each dormitory and other qualified personnel to conduct different programs.

Registered nurses also are on 24-hour duty throughout the program.

Gov. James Thompson attended for a brief speech.

The groups elect city, county and state officials and perform the duties pertaining to various public offices.

Through this process they learn about elections, laws, balloting and petitioning and they also receive instruction in parliamentary procedure and Americanism.

Dorothy Hinson is the director of the Illinois state program.

samples, but a spokesman for the department told them such tests were unnecessary and cost-prohibitive.

"You more or less have got to put your faith in them (the state agencies), that if there's any problem, it will be taken care of," Smith said.

Alderman Partney worries that west Granite City might not be the only area affected and he wants the EPA to take samples from elsewhere in the city, where the wind may have blown dust containing the chemicals.

Partney pledged to "keep the pressure on the EPA" to get the tests done and to "make sure they're done in an expedient manner."

Partney said that if the investigation drags on, property values of houses around the plant could fall; if that happens, it would be a disaster to the city's ability to borrow money on their homes.

"Even if there's no health risk, you've still got the economic factor to consider," he said.

Partney said Virginia Wood had promised to update him every two weeks on the investigation.

oread loafers, they said.

Sauerwin and Woodworth reported that earlier they had yelled at Tommy, telling him to get down off the bridge and not jump.

After a train went by the boy jumped, Sauerwin told police, adding that he ran along the bridge looking for his friend but couldn't find him anywhere.

The Twin Rivers Rescue Squad from the Wood River area joined Coast Guardsmen in the river search.

CHAMPAIGN — Moving this summer? You can leave home without them — cockroaches, that is — at a University of Illinois entomologist.

While roaches commonly are transported from old-fashioned residences to another, there are lots of ways to lose them — including freezing them out — Philip Nixon, who provides indoor-insect information to 100 Illinois county cooperative extension offices.

The common varieties of U.S. household cockroaches — German, American, Oriental or Water Bug, and Brown Banded — probably originated in northern Africa, and though extremely hardy, can't survive freezing conditions, Nixon said. "So, if you subject them to low temperatures, you will kill off all the stages — the active roaches and the eggs," he said.

The kitchen is by far a roach's favorite room; the bottoms of things — especially small appliances — their prime hiding places.

"I've run as many as 45 cockroaches out of a single toaster," Nixon said.

So the entomologist suggests wrapping suspect appliances in plastic for protection and placing them in the freezer for three days.

Other suggestions include: •Stop spraying two weeks before packing. Spraying may drive roaches out of hiding places and into belongings. If possible, spray the new location before arrival, making sure to hit the cracks and crevices.

"When packing, check the bottoms of objects for signs of roaches," Nixon said. "The most common U.S. household variety — are easy to spot. They are up to one-half inch long and brown; their egg cases are about half that size, and also brown."

"Unpack boxes in the center of the room, allowing application of the time-honored method of roach control: stepping on them. Wash clothes and dry them in a hot dryer, or dry-clean them."

Having roaches isn't necessarily a sign of bad housekeeping, since they can ride in objects brought into a home or pass on adjoining apartments, Nixon said. "If they get to be very numerous or overwhelm you, that's an indication you may have as clean as you should be," he said.

"Guge numbers are indicative of poor sanitation." Still, even the cleanest human is "too dirty to starve out a roach," Nixon said.

"The occasional crumb of food that falls even in an immaculate house is enough to keep roaches going," he said. "You can make them hungry, but it's almost impossible to starve them to death."

and Davis rode a railroad engine onto the bridge and searched the structure and pier where Tommy was last seen, also without results.

Sauerwin, plus John R. Woodworth, 17, and Tonya Wallace, 15, both of Granite City, saw the river swimming when the man dived his brother to jump, Callene Bates said.

Woodworth and Wallace both told police they saw Tommy hit the water. The boy was clad in blue soccer shorts and multi-col-

•Roaches

"...We own our house, so it's not like we are going anywhere," she said. "Unless, of course, the roaches run us out."

The man who said he owns the 2006 Dewey house was ready to give it up for lost on Thursday. He said he had agreed to sell it to a friend if the friend would finish the payments.

"Then (the friend) called me up one night and said: 'The house is all yours. I'm giving it back,'" he said. "I can't believe what they've done to it."

Mize said he offered to buy the house just to tear it down. The owner said he was willing to sell it to her as long as he got part of his money back.

At least two other people claim to own at least part of the house, however, and no one has paid the property taxes this year. According to city officials, establishing ownership is always the hardest part of a condemnation.

All parties agree the house eventually will be torn down. In the meantime, the roaches continue to wander across the lawn, over the white concrete base on Mize's chain-link fence, through her beds, on marigolds and on down the block.

Rayburn said she has already been killing them on her porch and she believes nobody on the block is safe from them.

"You'd think somebody could do something," she said.

Parental neglect, alcohol abuse biggest problems for students

By Dennis McMurray
Staff writer

SPRINGFIELD — Parental neglect and alcohol abuse were the list of problems facing students in schools across the Midwest, according to results of a poll of teachers and administrators unveiled recently.

Illinois was one of 10 states whose data were recently issued by the Midwest Legislative Conference of the Council of State Governments.

Nearly six in 10 of the teachers, principals and district administrators said the most significant obstacle to learning was parental neglect.

The second-most-frequently cited problem was alcohol abuse by students. However, that was less often cited as a problem by Illinois educators than by those in other Midwestern states. It was listed by 44 percent of the Illinois teachers and administrators as a problem in their schools, compared to 57 percent in the entire region.

Educators in Illinois were less likely to want the state to be involved in education reform, according to the poll. Only 40 percent favored additional state involvement, compared to 64 percent for the entire region.

Other findings of the survey, which were not broken down by state, included:

•83 percent favored legislation encouraging business and school partnerships.

•68 percent opposed lengthening the school day and said it would hurt the quality of education.

•63 percent said allowing parents to choose their children's schools would help improve education.

In Illinois 500 teachers, 161 principals and 171 district administrators participated in the poll conducted by the Top Organization.

Copies of the results will be sent to governors before the fall education summit conference to be convened by President George Bush.

Baise seeks treasurer post

Gregory W. Baise, secretary of the Illinois Department of Transportation, on Aug. 28 declared his candidacy for the office of state treasurer, which will be held in the Republican primary in March 1990.

"I am here today to announce a decision that I have worked toward for more than a decade," said Baise. "With the advice and consent of my family, I am formally declaring my candidacy."

"The state treasurer is the banker for the state of Illinois. It is his responsibility to ensure the safekeeping and prudent investment of monies and securities deposited in the treasury."

"In recent years the treasurer has had custody of as much as $2.6 billion. It will be my goal to maximize the interest earned on funds invested while continuing to improve the economy through the state through such programs as the Line Deposit Program, which aided Chrysler Corp. and its employees in Belleville and the Agricultural Reduction Loan Deposit Program, which has made more than $6.00 low-interest loans to farmers over the past eight years."

Baise, 37, of Springfield, was appointed secretary of the Illinois Department of Transportation in 1984. Prior to that he held several positions within the administration of Gov. James R. Thompson, including director of the state auditor and a wide range of areas.

In 1984, Baise successfully served as campaign manager for Reagan/Bush '84 in Illinois. Two years later, he guided Gov. Thompson to a 389,000-vote margin for re-election and an unprecedented fourth-term victory.

He also served as a statewide co-chairman of President George Bush's election effort in Illinois in 1988.

Baise is a native of the Jacksonville area and received his bachelor's degree in history and government from Illinois College in 1974. Directly afterward he was appointed associate director of development for Illinois College and served in that capacity until 1977.

He joined Thompson during the governor's first campaign for governor. Baise also served as an aide in Jacksonville, the youngest ever elected to that office.

Baise and his wife Tonya and their two children, Todd and Erin, live in Springfield.

Cahokia quickness too much for GC

By Dave Whaley

CAHOKIA — The high hopes of a new season met with reality for the Warriors on Friday. And that was just fine with the Cahokia Comanches.

After some first-quarter jitters, the Comanches turned on the steamroller and caught the Warriors under their wheels. Cahokia dominated the second half on the way to a 32-7 victory in the season opener for both teams.

"For the Comanches, it was a terrific team effort as 12 different players carried the ball and totaled 238 rushing yards. For the Warriors, it was more misery as they lost for the 15th straight time over a span of three seasons. Granite City managed only 36 total yards.

"I'm very discouraged and disappointed," said Warrior coach Ron Yates as he surveyed the scene of the crime. "Our offensive line just got tired out. That is not a good sign considering it was just the first game of the year."

While the Warriors sputtered, the Comanches sizzled. Senior Nehemiah Sims had 95 yards on 11 carries and two touchdowns, while fellow senior Cornelius Johnson added 82 yards on only five carries and two scores of his own, including a 69-yard sprint on the third play of the second half which put Cahokia ahead for good.

"I really thought we controlled the game from the second quarter on," said Comanche coach Rob Eden. "We came out flat and had some first-game jitters. We could have folded, but we didn't. I felt we were in better condition than Granite City was, and that looked to be the case."

The Warriors got the first break when a bad snap on a Comanche punt gave them a first down on the Cahokia 51. Quarterback Bobby Thomas ran four yards and kicked the extra point for a 7-0 Warrior lead with 4:14 left in the first quarter. There weren't many more highlights after that.

Terry Nouri intercepted Comanche quarterback Hurlie Cozart on the next series, but the Warriors failed to move. Mike Mueller punted to the Comanche 35. On third and 4 from the 41, Sims sprinted off tackle to the right, then cut back against the grain down the left side for 49 yards and a first down at the Warrior 10. He scored from three yards out two plays later, although Sims was stopped just short on a sweep

Trojans grounded by Waterloo, 35-6

By Mike Kelly

MADISON — They came, they saw, they conquered.

That about summed up Waterloo's 35-6 season-opening blowout of the Trojans on Friday at Sam Dymally Memorial Field. As was the case in last year's opener, a 27-0 Waterloo victory, the Bulldogs easily controlled the line of scrimmage offensively and defensively. Madison, which committed five turnovers, was limited to five first downs and 67 yards of total offense.

Waterloo, on the other hand, racked up 289 yards of total offense, 211 of which came on the ground, and 15 first downs. Senior fullback Rich Groves did most of the damage, rambling for 123 yards on 20 carries while scoring four touchdowns. His running mate, senior tailback Denny Davis, who left the game midway through the fourth quarter with leg cramps, picked up 78 yards on 17 attempts and scored on two.

"These guys have been together for three years, so they know what to do when they get the ball," said Waterloo coach Sid Allen. "They're aggressive running backs who complement each other well. They don't possess exceptional speed, but once they get through the line it's tough to stop them because of their size (Groves is 5-11, 198 pounds, while Davis is 6-1, 191). "I'm kind of surprised we won by such a large margin tonight. But I think the kids expected to win this game. We didn't look past Madison, even though this is a team we're expected to beat. The real test, though, will come next week against Duqu. They're one of those name teams we must beat if we're to make the playoffs."

Madison coach Don Smith, who was very frustrated after the game, felt inexperience really hurt his team, especially on defense.

"Waterloo doesn't have a lot of speed, but they were able to get outside on us because our people didn't react quickly enough," he said. "We just did everything wrong. The second, any people just didn't back up the defensive ends. And in order to have any success against Waterloo you must be able to

left on the conversion try and the Warriors still led 7-6 with 8:00 left in the half.

"Sims just has amazing balance," said Edén. "He was that far off the ground (about a foot), but he stayed up and kept going."

"There wasn't enough rain today," said Yates. "Sims is just so quick. We can't simulate that quickness in our practices."

The Warriors got a break late in the half. Sims hit Demetrio Spragins on a option pass for 40 yards down to the 5 with less than a minute left. The Comanches were out of timeouts and on the 4 when time ran out.

"I thought that might come back and hurt us, but at the same time I felt good because we had dominated that quarter," said Edén.

"I really thought we would come out in the second half and do the job," said Yates. "But we just didn't have it."

Johnson got loose down the right sideline for his long TD run, then Cozart hit Spragins for what amounted to a 17-yard two-point conversion after a clipping penalty had set Cahokia back. Darrell Hunt blocked Mueller's punt on the next series and Sims went seven yards with 8:16 left in the third quarter, then scored the two-point conversion himself for a 22-7 Comanche lead.

"We let somebody come in from the outside and Mike took a little too much time getting the punt away," said Yates. "The turnovers and mistakes just piled up on us."

Thomas fumbled on the first play of the next series, then Sims' big punt return put the Comanches in business early in the fourth quarter. Johnson scored from two yards out and sophomore quarterback Mario Ferguson scored the two-point conversion. The Comanches added two more points when Mueller fielded a bad snap on a punt in his own end zone and was tackled.

At first it was ruled a touchdown when Mueller fumbled and Chris Monroe recovered for Cahokia, but a quick whistle changed it to a safety. Edén didn't mind.

"We don't like running the score up on anybody," he said. "We could be in that spot someday ourselves. I'm kind of glad it wasn't a touchdown."

The Warriors gained only 32 yards rushing and Thomas was able to complete only one pass in four attempts, a four-yarder to Steve Evanoff on the game's final play. They managed only three first downs.

"I'm going to have to get myself up mentally for this week," said Yates. "Our juniors on the defensive line did pretty well, but their quickness just killed us."

The Comanches, meanwhile, came at the Warriors in waves. "We are strong at running back," said Edén. "And our defensive line did a great job. We're not big, but we're quick. We had a lot of penalties tonight (8 for 70 yards), but I hope we got that out of the way."

The Comanches play at Belleville West next Saturday. The Warriors play at Quincy on Friday, unless the Quincy teachers remain on strike. If they're still striking Wednesday, the game will be cancelled and the Warriors might be able to schedule CBC for Friday on the road.

"There's plenty of work to do before then."

forced to punt. A bad snap from center sailed over Demarco Cason's head for a 31-yard loss, and Waterloo was in business at the Madison 5-yard line. Davis punched it in three plays later and Waterloo led 6-0.

Madison forged a tie with 1:56 to go in the first period when Cason picked off a screen pass by Eric Maurer from his tackle spot and rambled 40 yards for a touchdown.

"That was a heck of a play," said Allen. "We had the screen set up perfectly, but that kid (Cason) is very quick and stepped in front of the pass creating the big play."

But the fireworks ended right there for Madison. Waterloo brushed off the miscue and erupted for 22 unanswered points in the second quarter, giving the Bulldogs a comfortable 28-6 half-time cushion. A pair of long scoring drives by Waterloo (63 and 64 yards), an incomplete pass on a fake punt by Trojan quarterback Federico Walker and a fumble by Tony Treadway deep in his own territory fueled the disastrous period.

"We simply killed ourselves with crucial mistakes," said Smith. "You can't make mistakes like that and hope to get away without any damage being done. The quarterback spot really hurt us."

"Federico just did everything wrong. Maybe he'd be better suited to play somewhere else. He just didn't react properly in certain situations. It's very frustrating. As of right now the quarterback spot is open again. We'll have to try someone else like Ira Rockett, Cerryn Thomas or Derrick Williams and see if they can handle the position."

Treadway, despite his team's dismal showing, led Madison with 71 hard-earned yards on the ground.

"Treadway and Cason played real well," said Smith. "Hopefully, their efforts can rub off on the younger kids. All I can ask is that the kids give me their best effort. Next week we go to Columbia. They're not as big as Waterloo, so maybe that will pick up the kids' confidence and we'll get some positive results."

Classes for special-education adults

GRANITE CITY — The College for Independence will begin its new year on Sept. 11.

The purpose of the college is to provide developmentally disabled adults with social, recreational and educational activities. The tuition of $25 per year helps offset the cost of transportation and materials.

The school is planning a different but equally active year. Three field trips will be taken. Guest speakers will come from such organizations as the American Red Cross, University of Illinois Extension Service, Attorney General's Office and Trehouse Wildlife Center among many others.

Some of the topics that will be covered are: efficient grocery shopping; personal safety; consumer education concerning phone, mail and door solicitations; first aid; and computer skills.

Dagmar Davis, special education teacher, will conduct classes in common German phrases and will also do nature instruction. Plans are being developed for students to take part in the Very Special Arts Festival at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

Classes will be held on Mondays at Coordinated Youth Services, Delmar and Niedringhaus avenues, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Transportation is provided by ACT (Agency for Community Transit).

For registration, families may call Carolyn at 531-2943 or Dorothy at 876-0451. If transportation is not needed, registration may be done on the opening night.

The College for Independence is a non-credit program for special education graduates or drop-outs. It is sponsored by the Parents for Special Education.
